To whom it may concern

Jon Gillespie-Brown has been working with me for the last 4years during which time he has help guide me through the setting up of my company it's financing and its first sale.

As part of the development of my business it was important for me to identify a mentor who had a broad understanding of the technology market and experience in dealing with corporate organisations.

Although Jon is not officially working for my company he provides the sort of support and commitment to the building of the business as if he were a share holder.

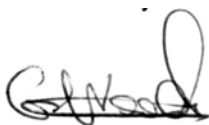

The type of advice I required needed to come from somebody who was both enthusiastic about my company's product as well as knowledgeable on all aspects of the business.

One of Jon's many qualities is his capacity to listen and understand, he is great at identifying and solving issues. By his calm and enthusiastic nature he has been able to guide me through the tasks that need to be gone through to establish a business in today's climate.

I believe a mentor needs to be objective with their approach and not just provide the feel good factor, Jon does just that he is positive in his advice and says what he thinks. I would recommend Jon to anybody who is looking to build a business, he brings all-round business development knowledge and sound advice.

Its one thing to have a brilliant product it's another getting it to sell! Jon has helped me to establish my business, it's now up to me to make it flourish and grow.

Yours faithfully

Greg Wood
Chief Executive
